

I oppose further erosion of the Government's ability to restrict the tendency to more monopolistic use of the "free" airwaves. The argument that many sources of news are available is a farce. We all know that the big money controls what most people watch already, and that is what forms the opinions of most of the voters. Don't make this even worse. Please protect some competition in news markets to allow for alternative presentation of opinions.

Edward Jones